Forecast For Strathclyde
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 27 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy but mostly dry for today.

Today:
From the Central Belt southwards rather cloudy with a few isolated early light showers but most areas staying dry. Best of the limited brighter spells expected across Argyll. Winds turning easterly and freshening later across west coasts and Isles. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud thickening and lowering to bring rain and snow to Ayrshire late evening, which extends into the Central Belt overnight. Heavier outbreaks and strengthening winds reaching far southwest towards dawn. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Thursday:
Cloudy with occasional rain, sleet and snow, mostly light but potentially heavier overnight in the south. Easterly winds occasionally strong in west. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cloud rain, sleet and snow early Friday clearing as dry and sunny conditions develop. Saturday mainly dry, bright with light winds. Snow then rain spreading from west Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.